LONDON, April 15.—German aeroplanes this afternoon were dropping bombs in Kent within 30 miles of London.

The machines first made their appearance at 4 o'clock in the east of Kent, and at 4.15 miles from London. Within a few minutes they were over Dover, Canterbury, and the capital and very shortly afterwards they appeared over London in the last, by hours, the east of Kent, and at 4.15 miles from London.

This was the third German aerial raid in the last 36 hours. The first was at 10.15 miles from London, and the second at 10.15 miles from London.

STAGE SET FOR BOXING SHOW ON WEST SIDE TONIGHT

Tommy Jones and Fay Kulser in Fine Condition
for Their Go.

PRELIMINARIES TO BE FAST

Crowd Expected to be Larger Than at Any Previous Show. Out of Town
Fans Having Reserved Large Batch
of Seats: Carter to Meet Ward.

Everything is ready for the big boxing show at the West Side tonight. All hall tonight and the audience point to a record breaking crowd. The largest crowd in years attended the last show, but this one is expected to draw even better.

Tommy Jones of New Castle, who is to meet Fay Kuls-er in the ring,
arrived in the city this afternoon, accompanied by Jimmy Dime, his manager, and a number of others from the time camp. Jones looks to be in a fine condition and he says he never felt better in his life. The referee, who has a worthy opponent in Kuls-er, for Joe Chip, who met Kuls-er at the last show, was able to tell a few things from personal experience.

Kuls-er has been working hard here
for the last four days, taking rest
work in the morning and gym training in the afternoon. He is expected to make 115 pounds for his bout with Jones but he will weigh in tonight
well within that limit.

The show will start promptly at 8 o'clock with a six round bout between Duncan of Uniontown and Joe Hall, and the semi-windup will bring together Bill Carter and Gitting Ward
for a six round session.

Out of town light fans are coming strong, especially for seats. Having been reserved from Uniontown,
Uniontown, Scotland and Mount Pleasant.

About Rheumatism.
People are learning that it is only a waste of time and money to take medicine internally for chronic and muscular rheumatism, and about ninety-nine out of a hundred cases are one of the other of these facts. All that is really necessary to afford relief is to apply Chamberlain's Liniment to the joints. Mrs. H. Miller, Logan-port, Ind., writes, "I have used Chamberlain's Liniment for rheumatism and it always gives relief." For sale by all dealers.—Adv.

"EXPLOITS OF BLAINE" TODAY.
The thirteenth episode of the "Ex-day at the Saison Theatre. The story series are growing to a close and the pictures are getting more interesting.

Geo. Middleton and Joe King appear in a three part Gold Seal drama, "The Duchess," that is sensational. The play is thrilling, charming and full of comedy. "In a Jackpot," is a real outlet of pure fun. Tomorrow, George Middleton and George Chapman are the stars in the celebrated five act drama, "Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch."

AMOLOX THE NEW DISCOVERY

Many Cures Reported Daily in Towns
Where It Is Known.

The wonderful cures that are being made by this remarkable new remedy
are almost beyond belief.

A young lady from Ottumwa, Iowa,
for many years suffered from a bad case of eczema. Her face was a sight to behold; all covered with red blotches, pustules and pimples. So unsightly was her appearance she gave up all social life. Failing to find relief with doctors and remedies, she became despondent and discouraged.
After a few weeks' treatment, she found relief and the skin redness disappeared, pustules healed and her face was entirely cured. A few months following her mother wrote that Amolox
had done wonders for her daughter, and she was married last week.

This is only one of the many cases that are being reported in towns where Amolox has been introduced and its merits have become known. Amolox treatment will quickly banish pimples,
blackheads and all minor skin troubles.
Bad cases of Eczema, Psoriasis, Tetter,
and skin diseases lasting for years,
should use both ointment and liquid to effect a cure. Trial size, 50c. Guaranteed
by Graham & Co.—Adv.

HE WAS THIN

Weighted 135 Pounds. Now Weight
160, a 25-Pound Increase.

"When I started taking Sargol my weight was only 135 pounds," writes H. E. Hemminger. "Now my weight is 160 pounds and I am the picture of health and strength than I ever was before. You may use my letter for I am sure it will help some-body in the same shape I was. Would not take $100 for the good it has done me."
"When I commenced taking Sargol I weighed 115 pounds. I have been taking it only 25 days and weigh 130 pounds," writes Miss Lillie Davis. "I gained seven pounds in 10 days," states W. P. Thickery.

And so it goes. Some folks take the story in testimonials because they say people are apt to take treatment for some disease and just imagine they feel better. But Sargol is not a treatment for any disease. It simply puts firm, healthy, "stay there" fat and muscular tissue on men and women who are thin, run-down and underweight. There is no guess work—no imagination about it. These people weigh themselves before they begin. They weigh themselves each week thereafter and the scales tell the story. Hundreds upon hundreds of Sargol users are constantly reporting increases in weight ranging all the way from 10 to 100 pounds.

Sargol is just a thin tablet, which you eat at meals. It mixes with your food and turns all the fats, sugars, starches and oils of your body into rich, ripe, flesh-producing nourishment for the tissues and blood. If you are underweight it is certain that the greater portion of the fat-producing material in your food is going through your body as waste. You eat and eat but get no benefit. Sargol cures this waste, this dangerous leakage of fats and the result is quickly noted as the hollows of the body fill out with healthy flesh.

You risk no loss in taking Sargol,
as feeding stimulants everywhere sell it with a positive guarantee of increased weight as contained in every package.

Absolutely harmless. Costs little if it ever fails and nothing if it fails. If you are 10 pounds or more underweight you owe it to yourself to try it.

Give This a Thought

There are grades of Oleomargarine, just as there are in goods of every kind. Judge the merits of Oleomargarine solely by CHURNGOLD, not by lower grades offered at catchy prices. Before this pure, sweet palatable "GOLD of the CHURN" was placed upon the market several years ago, the vast majority constantly using CHURNGOLD today would not touch Oleomargarine at any price. But CHURNGOLD has made a myriad of converts and continues to make more every day, because it has purity, sweetness and integrity to support its claim as the finest quality of Oleomargarine that can be churned.

CHAPTER XXVII.

Valor in Retrospect.

In the month of May, when the chestnuts bloom in the green dells, where the delicate young foliage holds the light in its golden cups, a young man walked through one of the small nooks of the Bois at the fashionable noon hour, a little reddish dog trotting at his heels. The young man walked with an imperceptible limp. He was thin, as men are who have lived hard and who have overcome tremendous obstacles. He was tanned as men are browned who have come from eastern and extreme southern countries.

The little dog had also an imperceptible limp occasioned by a bicycle running over him when he was a puppy.

The two companions seemed immensely to enjoy the spring day. Sabron every now and then stood for a few moments looking at the gay masses of pedestrians and equestrians, enjoying to the full the repose of civilization, the beauty of his own land.

Pitcheune looked with indifference upon the many dogs. He did not stir from his master's side. When Sabron was quiet, the little animal stood at attention; he was a soldier's dog. He could have told dog stories to those magnificent worldly dogs—could have told of really thrilling adventures. His brown eyes were full of fire with their appeal of affection as they looked up at his beloved master. He had a fund of experience such as the poodles and the terriers led by their owners could not understand. Therefore Pitcheune was indifferent to them. Not one of those petted, ridiculous house dogs could have run for miles in the dark across an African desert, could have found food and shelter and fetched and carried for his master. Pitcheune was proud of it. He was very well matched with his master. He was still young; other dogs of valor were gray before him—who can tell? At any rate he had been shown about at the ministry of war, been very much admired, and he was a proud animal.

When Sabron spoke to him he leaped upon him and wagged his tail. After a few moments the two stood near the exit of an alley in order to one of the grand avenues, Pitcheune slowly went in front of his master and toward two ladies sitting on a bench in the gentle warmth of the May sunlight. Pitcheune, moved from his usual indifference, gave a short bark, walked up to the ladies and began to sniff about their feet. The younger lady exclaimed, and then Sabron, lifting his hat, came forward, the crimson color beating in his dark tanned cheeks.

The Marquis d'Esclagnac held out both hands to the officer.

"It's nearly noon," she said, "and you don't forget that you have promised to lunch with us, do you, Monsieur le Capitaine?"

Sabron, bending over her hand, assured her that he had not forgotten. Then his eyes traveled to her companion. Miss Redmond wore a very simple dress, as was her fashion, but the young officer from Africa, who had not seen her near by until now and who had only caught a glimpse of her across the opera house, thought that he had never seen such a beautiful dress in all his life. It was made of soft gray cloth and fitted her closely, and in the back of her mannish little buttonhole she wore a few Parma violets. He recognized them. They had come from a bunch that he had sent her the night before. He kissed her hand, and they stood talking together.

"My Manhood and My Love Are My Fortune."

the three of them, for a few moments, Pitcheune stationing himself as a sentinel by Miss Redmond's side.

The Marquis d'Esclagnac rose. The young girl rose as well, and they walked on together.

"My enfants," said the Marquis d'Esclagnac, "don't go with your usual rush, Julia. Remember that Monsieur de Sabron is not as strong as Hercules yet. I will follow you with Pitcheune."

But she spoke without knowledge of the dog. Now feeling that some unwelcome happiness had suddenly burst upon the horizon that he knew, Pitcheune seemed suddenly seized with a rollicking spirit such as had been his characteristic some years ago. He tore like mad down the path in front of Sabron and Miss Redmond. He whirled around like a dervish, he dashed across the road in front of automobiles, dashed back again, springing upon his master and whirling at the girl's feet.

"See," said Sabron, "how happy he is."

"I should think he would be happy. He must have a knowledge of what an important animal he is. Just think! If he were a man they would give him a decoration."

And the two walked tranquilly side by side.

Pitcheune ran to the side of the road, disappeared into a little forest all shot through with light. He came back, bringing the remains of an old rubber ball lost there by some other dog, and laid it triumphantly in front of Miss Redmond.

"See," said Sabron, "he brings you his trophies."

CHAPTER XXVIII.

Happiness.

Le Comte de Sabron finished his dressing.

Brunet surveyed his master from the tip of his shining boots to his sleek, fair head. His expressive eyes said: "Monsieur le Capitaine is looking well tonight."

Brunet had never before given his master a direct compliment. His eyes only had the habit of expressing admiration, and the manner in which he performed his duties, his devotion, were his forms of compliment. But Sabron's long illness and absence, the fact that he had been snatched from death and given back to the army again, leveled between servant and master the impassable wall of etiquette.

"There will be a grand dinner tonight, will there not, Monsieur le Capitaine? Doubtless Monsieur le Colonel and all the gentlemen will be there." Brunet made a complimentary gesture as though he complimented the entire staff.

Sabron, indeed, looked well. He was thin, deeply bronzed by the exposure on the yacht, for he and Tremont before returning to France had made a long cruise. Sabron wore the look of a man who has come back from a far country and is content.

"And never shall I forget to the end of my days how Monsieur le Capitaine looked when I met the yacht at Marseilles!"

Brunet spoke reverently, as though he were chronicling sacred souvenirs. "I said to myself, you are about to welcome back a hero, Brunet! Monsieur le Capitaine will be as weak as a child. But I was determined that Monsieur le Capitaine should not read my feelings, however great my emotion."

Sabron smiled. At no time in his simple life did Brunet ever conceal the most trifling emotion—his simple face revealed all his simple thoughts. Sabron said heartily: "Your control was very fine, indeed."

"Instead of seeing a sick man, Monsieur le Capitaine, a splendid-looking figure, with red cheeks and bright eyes, came off the boat to the shore. I said to myself, 'Brunet, he has the air of one who comes back from a victory.' No one would have ever believed that Monsieur le Capitaine had been rescued from captivity."

Brunet's curiosity was very strong and as far as his master was concerned he had been obliged to crush it down. To himself he was saying: "Monsieur le Capitaine is on the eve of some great event. When will he announce it to me? I am sure my master is going to be married."

Pitcheune, from a chair near by, assisted at his master's toilet, one moment holding the razor-strop between his teeth, then taking the clothes brush in his little grip. He was saying to himself, "I hope in the name of rats and cats my master is not going out without me!"

Brunet was engaged to be married to the kitchen maid of the Marquis d'Esclagnac. Ordinances and regulations are not able to arrange their matrimonial affairs so easily as are the upper classes.

"Monsieur le Capitaine," said the servant, his simple face raised to his master's, "I am going to be married."

Sabron wheeled around: "Mon brave Brunet, when?"

Brunet grimaced sheepishly. "In five years, Monsieur le Capitaine," at which the superior officer laughed heartily.

"Is she an infant, are you educating her?"

"When one is the eldest of a widow," said Brunet with a sigh, "and the eldest of ten children—"

The clock struck the quarter. Sabron knew the story of the widow and ten children by heart.

"Is the taxi at the door?"

"Yes, Monsieur le Capitaine."

Pitcheune gave a sharp bark.

"You are not invited," said his master, and went gayly out his sword hitting against the stairs.

The Marquis d'Esclagnac gave a brilliant little dinner to the colonel of Sabron's squadron. There were present a general or two several men of distinction, and among the guests were the Duc de Tremont and Madame de la Maine. Sabron, when he found himself at table, looked at everything as though in a dream. Julia Redmond sat opposite him. He had sent her flowers and she wore them in her bodice. Madame de la Maine bent upon the young officer her brilliant eyes, the Duc de Tremont glanced at him affectionately, but Sabron was only conscious that Julia's eyes did not meet his at all.

They talked of Sabron's captivity, of the engagement in Africa, of what the army was doing, would not do, or might do, and the fact that the Duc de Tremont was to receive the decoration of the Legion of Honor in July. Tremont toasted Sabron and the young officer rose to respond with flushing face. He looked affectionately at his friend who had brought him from death into life. The moment was intense, and the Marquis d'Esclagnac lifted his glass.

"Now, gentlemen, you must drink to the health of Pitcheune!"

There was a murmur of laughter, Madame de la Maine turned to Sabron:

"I have had a collar made for Pitcheune. It is of African leather set with red turquoise."

Sabron bowed: "Pitcheune will be perfectly enchanted, Madame, he will wear it at your wedding."

Later, when the others had left him to himself in the music room, Sabron sat in a big chair by the open window, and Julia Redmond played to him. The day was warm. There was a smell of spring flowers in the air and the vases were filled with gladioli and sweet peas. But Sabron smelled only the violets in Julia's riddle. Her hands gently wandered over the keys, and the tune that Sabron longed to hear. She played the air through, and it seemed as though she were about to sing the first verse. She could not do so, nor could she speak.

Sabron rose and came over to where she sat.

There was a low chair near the piano and he took it, leaning forward, his hands clasped about his knees. It had been the life-long dream of this simple-hearted officer that one day he would speak out his soul to the woman he loved. The time had come. She sat before him in her unpretentious dress. He was not worldly enough to know it cost a great price, nor to appreciate that she wore no jewels—nothing except the flowers he had sent. Her dark hair was clustered about her ears and her beautiful eyes lost their fire in tenderness.

"When a man has been very close to death, Madame, he looks about for the reason of his resurrection. When he returns to the world, he looks to see what there is in this life to make it worth living. I am young—at the beginning of my career, I may have before me a long life in which, with health and friends, I may find much happiness. These things certainly have their worth to a normal man—but I cannot make them real before my eyes just yet. As I look upon the world to which I have returned, I see nothing but a woman and her love. If I cannot win her for my wife, if I cannot have her love—"

He made an expressive gesture which more completely than words implied how completely he had laid down everything else to love and his.

He said, not without a certain dignity: "I am quite poor; I have only a soldier's pay. In Normandy I own a little property. It is upon a hill and looks over the sea, with apple orchards and wheat fields. There is a house. These are my landed estates. My manhood and my love are my fortune. If you cannot return my love I shall not thank Tremont for bringing me back from Africa."

The American girl listened to him with profound emotion. She discovered every second how well she understood him, and he had much to say, because it was the first time he had ever spoken to her of his love. She had put out both her hands and, looking at him fully, said simply:

"Why it seems to me you must know how I feel—how can you help knowing how I feel?"

After a little he told her of Normandy, and how he had spent his childhood and boyhood in the chateau overlooking the wide sea, told her how he had watched the ships and used to dream of the countries beyond the horizon, and how the apple blossoms filled the orchards in the spring. He told her how he longed to go back, and that his wandering life had made it impossible for years.

Julia whispered: "We shall go there in the spring, my friend."

It was charming as he sat there holding her hands closely, his fine eyes bent upon her. Sabron told her things that had been deep in his heart and mind, waiting for her here so many months. Julia, everything merged into his present life, and the beauty of what he said dazed her like an enchanted sea. He was a soldier, a man of action, yet a dreamer. The fact that his hopes were about to be realized made him tremble, and as he talked, everything took light from this

THE END.

ACID STOMACHS ARE DANGEROUS

Common Sense Advice by a Distinguished Specialist.

"Acid" stomachs are dangerous because acid irritates and inflames the delicate lining of the stomach, thus hindering and preventing the proper action of the stomach, and leading to probably numerous other troubles of the stomach, trouble from which people suffer. Ordinary medicines and medical treatments are useless in such cases for they leave the source of the trouble, the acid in the stomach, as dangerous as ever. The acid must be neutralized, and its formation prevented, and the best thing for this purpose is a simple and old remedy in which warm oil with a little salt, which not only neutralizes the acid, but also prevents the fermentation from which acidity is developed. Foods which ordinarily cause distress may be eaten with impunity, if the meal is followed with a little liquid magnesia, which can be obtained from any druggist, and should always be kept handy—Adv.

PEACE IS DECLARED

Miners Return to Work After Trouble Settled.

WASHINGTON, Pa., April 15.—Following a conference here yesterday, announced that all the difficulties at the West No. 7 mine of the West Coast Company in 11 Federal town had been settled. The miners, following this announcement, the 21 men and 13 women held in the county jail on charges of rioting at the mine Monday were released from custody. The men to return to work immediately.

Under the terms of the agreement, John Dill, the checkbookman, whose discharge was the basis for the trouble, is reinstated. The seven miners, whose discharge added fuel to the flames, are all put back to work. The 100th eviction notice for certain of the miners is withdrawn and each side agrees to refrain from any subsequent litigation as a result of this present difficulty. As soon as the agreement had been accepted by both sides, 1,000 men went back to work.

A QUICK, SAFE RELIEF FOR INDIGESTION

If the peptic pills containing lactate or other digestive aids you have been taking seem to have lost their force and it now takes two or three to give you the relief you got at first from one, it is time you changed to a new remedy that works on a different principle.

When your stomach gets in such shape an effective and quick remedy is needed. It is found in Mison's Stomach Tablets, made from a scientific and radically different formula from the usual dyspepsia pills. Mison's not only gives prompt relief from sour, gassy, acrid heartburn and fullness, but by forcing the stomach to eat and digest properly, it makes a permanent cure. It is a healthy, normal condition.

A. A. Clark and leading druggists everywhere sell Mison's. A positive cure for indigestion, heartburn, flatulence, gas, and all other ailments of the stomach. It will prove its merit on the spot.
